In the heart of Sardinia the town of Nuoro is guarded by Su Monte, as the Nuoro inhabitants affectionately call Mount Ortobene which, suspended between past and present, shows solemn towers and pinnacles separated by steep gorges and surrounded by enchanting valleys. Nuoro is considered the symbol of the culture and traditions of the island and, due to the intense activity of great writers and artists, was named the "Sardinian Athens". Besides numerous archaeological evidence, the National Archaeological Museum offers an interesting exhibition of the heritage found in the province of Nuoro since Neolithic times. The city hosts the Istituto Superiore Regionale Etnografico that manages the important "Museo della Vita e delle Tradizioni Popolari Sarde" representing the way of living and culture of the islanders. Do not miss a visit to the renowned MAN (Nuoro Art Museum) that organizes many events including exhibitions and festivals of contemporary art and Grazia Deledda's house where a trip back in time makes you discover the society, places and personal belongings of the writer winner of the Nobel Prize for literature. The chief town was also home to famous artists such as Antonio Ballero and Giovanni Ciusa Romagna.
